(June 14, 2017 - Toronto, ON) – Today, Death From Above release a brand new video for the song, “Freeze Me” which was released last week and featured on the Season 4 premiere episode of HBO’s *Silicon Valley. The eccentric video, funded by MuchFACT and directed by Canadian filmmaker Corey Adams, was shot in Los Angeles and weaves the storyline in between and around the track’s ‘muscular’, omnipresent, monster riff. The video premiered via MUCH on national TV last night. Click HERE to watch and share “Freeze Me” and click HERE to order.

Death From Above vocalist/drummer Sebastien Grainger explains: “When Corey Adams started talking to us about making this video he said he wanted it to be about how body builders would spend their last day on earth before the nuclear apocalypse. He also mentioned there would be a guy dressed as Rambo playing a machine gun like an electric guitar and a lady body builder pumping iron under water. He had us at hello.”

“Freeze Me”, produced by Eric Valentine (Queens of the Stone Age, etc.), has already made its sonic presence felt. Says Spin Magazine, “The new, piano-sample-driven track is a typical, serrated piece of Death From Above-branded dance-rock, with a fierce noise breakdown toward the end.” See below for upcoming tour dates.
